A Tallinn-based logistics tech company Feeport has successfully connected its' x7trade software platform to Greek Customs import declarations IT system (ICISnet).

Offered as a SaaS, x7trade is a neutral technology for supply chain members to automatically customs clear low-value ecommerce goods imported into the customs territory of the EU from the third countries.

“This year we spent a lot of time talking to and learning about Greek logistics and their players. We realized that Greece is an evolving and important market in the southeastern Europe for the ecommerce and we need to be there. The Greek market has a good shot to be EU first entry point for not only Asia originated ecommerce, but also Israel, Turkey and the Middle East,” says Egor Paanukoski, co-founder of Feeport.

Founded in 2021 in Tallinn by a group of logistics and customs professionals, Feeport's x7trade platform is already connected to Estonian, Dutch and Finnish Customs import IT systems with more integrations under way. Eventually Feeport plans to connect its x7trade platform to the Customs import systems of all 27 EU Member States.
